

TAFT URGES THE PROPOSED TREATY

PRESIDENT AT URBANA THIS MORNING AND DISCUSSED CANADIAN RECIPROCITY.

TALKS TO THE LEGISLATURE

Went to Springfield This Afternoon Where He Will Be Entertained.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Urbana, Ill., Feb. 11.—President Taft, after an all night's run from Columbus, Ohio, arrived here this morning and started on his second day of speech-making in support of the proposed reciprocity with Canada.

Arriving at Urbana this morning, the President and his party proceeded by automobile to the state university, where he made a five minutes' address to the students.

The remainder of the day's program included a brief address at Milledge University, Decatur, and a trolley ride from Decatur to Springfield this afternoon. He will also speak at the Lincoln Day banquet in Springfield tonight.

At Springfield. Springfield, Ill., Feb. 11.—President Taft arrived here this afternoon and was cordially received. At the joint meeting of the legislature he spoke in advocacy of reciprocity with Canada, pointing out its benefits and especially to farmers.

At Champaign this morning he talked on reciprocity to the students of the state university. He told them of the proposed agreement looking toward free trade with Canada and predicted that if approved there would be no departure from it in the lives of young men of today. The President made brief speeches at Decatur and Monticello enroute to the capital.

After arraging that the American farmer needs no protection against Canadian competition, because the costs of production are practically the same in both countries, President Taft, addressing the Illinois legislature this afternoon said in part:

"The criticism that the reciprocity agreement with Canada is a manufacturer's agreement, however far it is a suggestion that we were prompted by manufacturers to avoid reductions on any of their goods, is wholly unfounded. The truth is, as between Canada and ourselves, a reciprocity agreement of necessity relate more to agricultural products than to manufacture. Here we stand upon more of an equality. In other words, the great benefit of this treaty is the profit in mutual exchange that will come in respect to the agricultural products of business."

"The change in agriculture in the older states from the raising of wheat alone to diversified crops and the raising of cattle and hogs is what increases the return per acre of land and makes the price of the land so much higher. The suggestion that the opening of our markets to Canadian wheat and other cereals will reduce the price of land in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa is refuted by every table of statistics that represents the comparative increases of land in those states under the influence of the opening of the wheat fields of the states further west."

"To let the wheat of the northwest come down to Minneapolis and Chicago will steady the price of wheat, prevent fluctuations, will make much more efficient speculation, and will furnish us greater insurance against the short crops and high prices. It will give to the United States much greater control of the wheat market than it has ever before had, it will enable the milling plants to turn Canadian wheat into flour and send abroad the finished product and it will stimulate the sale of manufacturers and other things that we have to sell in Canada."

"By the bringing over of live cattle, the farmer who has corn will have his raw material in abundance, and will fatten them for the Chicago market at a profit."

"The increase of our population and the reduction of our farm exports are going on so rapidly that unless a great increase in production is brought about within our borders we shall soon consume all that we raise and shall need a source of food supply like that of Canada right at our doors. We would be blind indeed, should we neglect this golden opportunity to add to the strength and virility of our country by thus increasing our self-sustaining capacity."

"There are those conservative protectionists who hang back from an approval of this agreement on the ground that it is a departure from the principles of protection and is the opening wedge to let in free trade. My own view is that no step could be taken more in the interest of a reasonable policy of protection than the approval of this treaty."

"The very existence of the policy depends upon our abolition of the tariff, where it is not really needed under the principles of the last republican platform. If we persist in restraining it in these times of high prices and gradually exhausting food supplies, and base our attention on protection principle, we shall run an opposition that will know no moderation and will not cease radical economy changes until it has removed from the statute book the last traces of a protective tariff."

Scheme Of Handling New Bills Proves A Good One—Large Number Of Licensor Measures.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Feb. 11.—The real business of the legislative session will begin after the last day of new bills, Tuesday. So many new measures have been offered the past week that no attempt has been made to look all of them over, owing to the new method of receiving them and bringing them back for formal ratification after they have been through the hands of the revision clerks. The effects of this change will be seen, however, later in the session if not now, for this scheme insures correct drafting in accordance with the statutes and makes less trouble for the various committees, which can therefore go directly into the merits of all measures.

A large number of bills relating to the liquor problem are due before Tuesday's session has been adjourned. Most of these have been drawn by persons connected with the Anti-Saloon league, although representatives of the brewers and retail liquor dealers also have a number to offer through members who are noted for their beliefs in the doctrine of "personal liberty."

FIND INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT NAVY

Special Board of Inquiry Finds U. S. Warships Have No More Accidents Than Those of Other Nations.

THE UNITED STATES.

Washington, Feb. 11.—Are there more accidents in the United States than in any other navy? Are the risks greater in service aboard the modern Dreadnaught than in modern Dreadnaughts? Is the machinery of an equal size on shore?

These two questions have been placed before naval officers so persistently of late that they are determined to prove to the public the reliability and safety of battleship management by American naval officers.

The criticism against the frequency of accidents in Uncle Sam's navy come from sources that demand consideration. Following the recent boiler explosion aboard the Dreadnaught Delaware in which nine men lost their lives, Representative Hobson, the expert of the House on naval matters, and formerly a United States naval constructor, said that the frequency of these accidents was due to the system prevailing in the American navy of requiring officers to do double duty, lighting, as well as engineering, which prevented them from becoming expert in engineering or battleship management.

Concerning the accidents due to gun explosions Sir Ulram Maxim, an international authority upon explosives, states that the fault should be laid upon the kind of powder used in the navy.

The navy is fighting against such accusations with all its might and main. At the request of Secretary Meyer, the bureau of ordnance made an exhaustive study of the charges of Sir Ulram Maxim and submitted a report denying their truth. The bureau laid the blame upon the types of guns, an evil which, they say, is now being eradicated and will soon disappear.

A special board of inquiry has been appointed to probe the question of certain gun explosions and ordnance accidents. Upon every accident of a serious nature the navy department is appointing a board of examination to make an exhaustive report.

The naval officers defend themselves by saying that there are no more accidents in the United States navy than in any other but that there is no navy in the world that permits such wide publicity to be given every disaster. They point out that the death of a few men in some factory ashore is purely a matter of local interest commented upon only in the press of that neighborhood, whereas the national character of the navy causes the story of every accident aboard ship to be heralded in every corner of the country. Other nations suppress the news of such accidents.

The modern Dreadnaught, they say, is a huge and complicated floating machine shop. Even with every precaution there is always an element of danger under these circumstances, but they maintain that statistics, if they could be compiled, would prove that the enlisted man of the navy is more carefully protected than the civilian employee working under similar conditions.

It is very probable that some precise information upon this subject will be gathered by the navy department and published to show the true comparative extent of accidents in the United States navy. This idea is being seriously discussed at the navy department now.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

If you treat the world right, if you give it its due, it is likely to try to deal fairly with you; if you give it a smile when you have one to spare, you will find that the days will more often be fair.

If you ask for no more than you honestly earn, if you look for no more than a proper return on investments you make and on risks that you take, you will seldom sit nursing a foolish heartache.

If you pick out your friends just for friendship, instead of favoring those who may push you ahead, disappointments will soon get to pass you by.

And the clouds will be fewer that darken your sky.

If you cheer where you may and give aid where you can, if you learn that good never has strengthened a man,

That selfishness is but a loathsome disease, you will find less to grieve you and much more to please.

If you learn that the weak are the ones who complain, you will find good in much you have viewed with disdain;

If you treat the world right, if you give it its due, it is likely to deal pretty fairly with you.

S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

The homely philosophy contained in this little poem is so true to life that the sentiment expressed will be appreciated. There are many kinds of investments which are of uncertain value, and but few ventures are absolutely safe.

The farmer sows his seed and takes the chances on results. The rain and sunshine necessary to development, are beyond his control, and the problem of a harvest becomes a lottery.

The man who invests in business enterprises expects to win, but there is no certainty about it, except that a large majority of his predecessors have not been successful.

Young men and young women invest years of time in securing an education which they expect to use as the foundation for a career, but the former lives as often as they win, while the latter frequently invest in a lottery which keeps them guessing for the rest of their lives.

It is a popular notion that we get out of life what we put into it, and while in a sense this is true, there are many investments which are disappointing in results.

The girl who invests in her new home all the love and graces of a pure and womanly character, is often startled by the revelation that she has won for a prize a companion who shocks her sensibilities, and the outlook for the year ahead is discouraging.

The man whose confidence has been betrayed by a friend in whom he had long placed implicit faith, turns aside with disgust, and is inclined to denounce all men as traitors.

The investigations now going on at the Capitol and in several of the states, have created the impression that all men in public life are dishonest, and that confidence invested in them is usually betrayed.

This notion is so widespread that it has created a political revolution, and the leaders of the movement are popular because they are supposed to be pure and incorruptible.

But the fact remains that a large majority of the men in public as well as in private life, are honest.

Graft and crime, like fire and flood, are always advertised, but virtue and honesty, like rain and sunshine, are so common that they attract no attention.

There would be no news in the statement that John Smith, the banker, closed a successful year's business, and still enjoys the confidence of the public, because bankers are making this kind of history all the time, but when a banker becomes a defaulter, his name is heralded over the land, and timid people become frightened and imagine that all banks are unsafe.

tom has pronounced many things right, which to say the least are questionable, and so the standard of morality suffers.

There are some reforms, which are neither erratic nor fanatical, which the City of Janesville needs. The town would be better off under the commission form of government. It would be better off with half the saloons eliminated.

Better off with a nine o'clock bell to tell the children it was time to get off the streets and go home.

Better off with fewer churches and larger concentration of effort. But like every other community, the people are getting value received for what they invest and the kind of government that the majority want.

LINCOLN SAID.

Liberty is your birthright.

Revolutionize through the ballot box.

I am nothing, but truth is everything.

The Union is older than any of the states.

Killing the dog doesn't cure the bite.

Working men are the basis of all governments.

All the world's a mine and every man a minor.

Give us a little more light and a little less noise.

You must remember that some things legally right are not morally right.

Those who deny freedom to others deserve it not for themselves; and, under a just God, cannot long retain it.

It has been said of the world's history hitherto that "might makes right"; It is for us and for our times to reverse the maxim, and to show that right makes might.

Do when I may, I want it said of me by those who know my best that I always plucked a thistle and planted a flower where I thought it would grow.

—Lincoln.

Heart to Heart Talks.

BY EDWIN A. NYE.

WHAT ARE YOU WORTH?

How much are you worth commercially in dollars and cents?

It is said of some people that they are "worth their weight in gold," which commercially is not true. Enthralled in the weight of the average person, that would make about $31,000. Your body certainly is not worth that much.

Analyze it.

In the first place, the average body contains at least nine gallons of water, and water in that quantity has no value commercially.

There is enough lead in your body to make a big pile of lead pencils if you could get at it.

And there is enough phosphorus to make a good many boxes of matches, but not enough to pay a chemist to separate it.

And, though you may lack considerably in being the "salt of the earth," there are in your body at least six ounces of salt.

There is also sugar, a pound or so, depending upon how fat you are. Literally the fattest are the sweetest.

Besides, there are a little soda and other ingredients, sufficient perhaps to make a good sized bar of soap.

And that is all, except the gas, of which there is enough in you to fill a fair sized balloon.

In short, you are bankrupt.

Physically you are mostly water and gas, neither of which is of value in the market place.

Instead of being worth your weight in gold—$31,000—you are scarcely worth your weight in dust.

What are you worth? Whatever your real wealth may be, it resides in the mental and moral qualities that you possess.

That is all.

Except under slavery your body is commercially worthless. And yet men sometimes sell themselves. What do they sell? Not their bodies. They sell their souls.

How much are you worth mentally? You may be worth millions, because all things are yours mentally. No man can keep you out of an intellectual fortune.

How much are you worth morally? Whatever you choose to be. You may make yourself of untold value morally or worthless, depending absolutely upon yourself.

What are you worth?

INTERURBAN RATE CASE SCHEDULED

CASE OF OTTO SCHICKER AGAINST
ROCKFORD AND INTERURBAN
COMPANY WILL BE HEARD.

BEFORE STATE COMMISSION

On Monday Morning, February 13, at Madison—Discrimination Is Charge of Petitioner.

Unusual interest is manifested in the case of Otto Schicker, petitioner, against the Rockford and Interurban Railway company, respondent, which will be heard before the state railroad commission at Madison on Monday morning, Feb. 13, at ten o'clock.

The charge brought by the petitioner is that the rate of ten cents charged by the Interurban company for passage from any place within the city of Janesville to the point on its line near the yards of the Northwestern road, known as South Janesville, is exorbitant and unjustly discriminatory.

And it is also charged against the company that a rate of five cents for one continuous passage from any point on the lines of the company within the city of Beloit to the point on its line outside the limits of the latter city known as the Beloit Country club, is a discrimination in favor of the citizens of Beloit. Both points in question are about equal distances outside the city limits of Beloit and Janesville and it is held by the complainant that like fares should be charged in both cases.

This case was filed with the railroad commission the latter part of December, 1910, by Otto Schicker. It is his allegation that these men are entitled to as low a rate as the people of Beloit are for a like distance and that they are in need of the same, as much inconvenience is oftentimes experienced on account of the exorbitant rate. It is further argued that the people of Janesville would be better off if a charge were placed within the case of the Northwestern employee to come to the city instead of being forced to stay at the hotel outside the city limits. It is also stated that the Northwestern Ry. company would not have placed the bunk and accommodations at the disposal of its employees at the yards, by which 75 to 80 men are transported to and from the yard daily, if the rate over the Interurban had not been exorbitant.

The respondent in the action admits the facts in the case as presented by the petitioner, but claim that their rate to the Janesville yards is not discriminatory as compared with the fare charged from the city of Beloit to the Country club, for the reason that the Interurban company does twice the amount of business over their line out of Beloit, which is a somewhat larger city than Janesville.

It is further alleged that within the last three years a large number of residences have been built along the line of the company north of the city of Beloit, which together with the Country club traffic makes a more considerable business than over the same distance out of Janesville. For these reasons the respondent in the case will ask for a dismissal of the proceedings.

At the hearing on Monday, Attorney T. S. Nolan will appear for the defendant company and Attorney H. L. Maxfield will appear for the petitioner in the case, Otto Schicker, who will be the chief complaining witness. Employees of the Interurban and others may be called to testify before the commission.

Adjudgment was again taken in the assault and battery action brought by Mrs. Mary Henderson against Ira Bryant of Sharon street for striking her small daughter with a stick, the judge setting the date for the further hearing of the case for April 1, beginning in the meantime that a settlement of the trouble, which is the outcome of a quarrel between the children of the two families, would be amicably settled. Both defendant and the plaintiff appeared in court, Bryant bringing along a neighbor's small boy as a witness and Mrs. Henderson appearing with her daughter. Both parties promised that there would be no further trouble between them in the meantime.

JANESVILLE CANINE TO SMOKE THE PIPE

Mrs. Genevieve Dower Has Sold One of Her Valuable Bull Terriers to Frederick Bowers, Actor.

Within a few months when the curtain rises on the opening act of "The Sweetest Girl in Paris," there will be a Janesville member of the company discovered gravely smoking a huge pipe. In everyday life he will be called very clever canine and will doubtless look back with envy to his puppy days with his mother and sister at the Dower home on South Main street. Frederick Bowers, who appeared here last evening in "The Sweetest Girl in Paris" company, has long been looking for an under study for his faithful "bully" pup who gravely smokes a pipe during his entrance scene. A friend told him of the clever dog that Miss Genevieve Dower owned and he would not be satisfied until he had seen and purchased the animal. The new addition to the dramatic corps of the company left this morning for the tour and will be started for his stage debut by his older canine friend and members of the company.

OBITUARY.

Eugene Okern Williams, Death came to sudden the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Williams, 500 West Milwaukee street, when their little ten month old son, Eugene Okern, passed away at two o'clock this morning. The child had been sick for about a week and his death comes as a severe shock to the fond parents. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock from the home.

Francis J. Burghardt.

Francis J. Burghardt passed away last evening at about seven o'clock at the home of his parents, 1314 West Buff street. The deceased was born in Mineral Point, Wis., June 7, 1884, and later came to this city with his parents. He entered the factory of the Rock River Machine Company where he learned the trade of a machinist and was valued as a faithful and industrious employee. As a workman he was conscientious and had mastered the details of his work with painstaking accuracy. He was a young man of exemplary habits and had a promising future. He was obliged to give up his work several years ago on account of sickness and spent considerable time in a northern sanitarium seeking relief from tuberculosis with which he was afflicted and which caused his death. Besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burghardt, he leaves three sisters and one brother.

The funeral will be held from St. Patrick's church Monday morning at nine o'clock.

Peter Cassidy.

Funeral services for the late Peter Cassidy, who was suddenly stricken on his way to the hospital, were held this morning at half past eight from Ryan's undertaking room and at nine o'clock from St. Patrick's church, Rev. James McNamee officiating. The pallbearers were: Michael Beggs, James Lawler, George Campbell, William Finley, William Connell, and John O'Leary. Interment was in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Mrs. Elizabeth Leech, Death came to Mrs. Elizabeth Leech last evening shortly before eight o'clock, at her home on South Jackson street. Death came suddenly and was due to various complications arising from old age.

The deceased was born at Sherrbrooke, Nova Scotia, Sept. 24, 1836. She came to Janesville a number of years ago and has made her home here for some years past. She was a member of St. Mary's church and was esteemed for her faithful devotion. Besides many friends she is mourned by three daughters: Mrs. Nestor Seguin and Miss Montie Leech of this city, and another in New York City. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon at two o'clock from St. Mary's church. Services will be strictly private and friends are requested to omit flowers.

SCHOOLS CELEBRATE LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY

All the Schools of the City Observed Anniversary of Beloved Statesman.

Yesterday afternoon nearly all the different grades of the city schools observed the birthday of Abraham Lincoln which occurs tomorrow, with appropriate exercises. Patriotic songs were sung by the pupils and stories were told by the teachers of the life and deeds of the beloved American statesman who is termed the savior of his country. Exercises and recitations were also given by pupils in some of the rooms.

At the high school the last periods of the afternoon were given over to a short program consisting of a declamation by Miss Ruth Humphrey entitled, "The Perfect Tribute," and a medley of patriotic airs, played by Miss Marion Weirick on the piano and Lloyd Curtiss on the drums.

Gave Two Addresses.

Thursday morning at the morning's exercises of the high school, T. M. Knudson gave the last of a series of two addresses on Norway and its literature. In the first talk he told briefly of the settlement of Norway and spoke of the early Norse ballads, the Sagas and Eddas of their early literature. The second address dealt with the life and works of Bjornstjerne Bjornson, one of the favorite Norse poets and writers. The influence of his writings on the trend of thought of the Norse people and their love of liberty was emphasized as was also the effect of the natural scenic surroundings on the products of his pen.

These addresses to the high school students are becoming more and more popular. Some excellent numbers are promised for next week.

FIREMEN HOPE TO RECEIVE INCREASE

Much Disappointed When Council Did Not Increase the Monthly Pay.

Keen disappointment is felt among the members of the fire and police forces of the city. It is said, over the failure of the common council to raise the salaries of the men at the meeting last Monday night. Reasons had been given some of the men, it is said, to believe that the increase would be granted, but the city fathers made no change when the salary list was offered by the finance committee and voted upon. The Beloit council gave the men in the Beloit fire department, who had served two years, five dollars a month more, making an increase from sixty-five dollars to seventy dollars a month. The firemen in Rockford, who were receiving seventy-two dollars a month per month now get fifty dollars a month raise.

No complaint has been made but the men feel that they are deserving of more pay. They are required to be on duty twenty-four hours every day, while men in other vocations serve but nine or ten. Comparison is also made of the wages received by other laborers. A mechanic's services, according to one contractor, are valued at $2.25 for nine-hour's work, and carpenters are also well paid.

Paid State Taxes: Town treasurers paying state taxes into this afternoon were: B. W. Little, treasurer of the town of Janesville, $27,762.29; C. E. Culver, town of La Prairie, $3,664.46; Murk A. Swan, town of Rock, $284.15.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON.

THIS is a bachelor woman of about forty-five who occasionally visits in the capacity of dressmaker several homes in our neighborhood. She is rather plain featured. She has no especial talents. She is not a brilliant talker or a particularly traveled or cultured woman.

She does not, of course, have the attraction of wealth to recommend her. And yet, the other way, when her name came up in the conversation, someone said:

"Yes, I like Miss L's dressmaking, but I rather like her even better. I just enjoy having her come to the house sometimes." Everyone who knew her echoed the sentiment.

Just this I think—she's so HEARTY.

I wonder if you know exactly what I mean by that word? I'm not quite sure it can carry all the meaning I want it to do to you.

What I mean is: So full of energy and enthusiasm, so much interested in everything, so happy, so alive, so well—I guess it's the best word I can find for it—so HEARTY.

Maybe an illustration will describe the quality best.

When you ask Miss L. how the world has been treating her since you saw her last, instead of giving an answer such as, "All right, I guess," or "Pretty well," as most of us do, no matter what our blessing, she tells you "splendidly."

And she says it in such a vigorous, happy, God-in-His-heavens-bright-with-the-world voice that you actually feel braced up as if something particularly nice had happened to yourself.

I have heard people murmur Miss L.'s popularity simply to the fact that she is interested in other people's interests, but I don't think it's wholly that.

That helps immensely, of course, as it always will in this world of egotistical little people who want nothing so much as an audience.

But I think the whole foundation of her charm is the fact that she is so keenly interested in everybody's doings—her own as well as other people's.

I heard a clever young college man tell what he thought men liked best in a woman, and it was just this quality—heartiness.

"I don't care whether a girl is pretty or plain, and I don't particularly care about brains," he put it, "but I do want a girl who's thoroughly alive and interested in what's going on about her."

I've heard girls say: "I'd give anything to be pretty."

Why?

"Because that makes people like you."

And yet these same girls are not cultivating that quality, or maybe more, friend-winning quality which lies quite within their reach.

I wonder why.

The Kitchen Cabinet

THE mind may feed on fancy, but the matter-of-fact stomach imperiously demands something more substantial.

The Kitchen.

Much has been said and written about the modern up-to-date kitchen. The ideal kitchen is not within the means of the everyday housekeeper; but it is possible to have one that is both convenient and attractive with small cost. Have the kitchen on the ground floor, if possible. The north and east exposure is considered the best, with plenty of air and light. If the window light is not sufficient, paint the walls and woodwork in light tints. The walls should be of hard finish, which can be cleaned.

Most housekeepers like a pine floor covered with linoleum, the soft wood being easier for the feet than a hard wood floor.

To preserve linoleum, varnish it each fall and spring. After it is hopefully worn off it may be painted in a solid color with a border of some contrasting hue, if desired.

Kitchen tables are best covered with zinc, which saves the constant scrubbing. When it is necessary to set a hot dish down the table need not be injured.

The sink and drain pipes should be carefully flushed every day with boiling water. Washing soda should be used frequently in the hot water to dissolve the grease gathered in the pipes.

A cupful of hot copperas water is a good disinfectant, as is chloride of lime.

All kitchen refuse should be burned when possible.

If the zinc table becomes stained, scour it with bath brick and borosilicate.

Blow the tea towels in cold water then in hot soap suds and again in cold water. Hang in the sun and air to dry.

To clean linoleum or oil cloth, wipe with a cloth wrung out of warm water, to which a little milk has been added.

Much of the flavor, daintiness and wholesomeness of food depends upon the care of the utensils used. Good coffee cannot be made in a pot that is simply rinsed out and put back on the stove. A coffee pot must be washed, scalded and cured for just as carefully as the milk dishes. Sun the pot every day. The sun is a good germicide.

FREEZING YOUR BREATH.

WE hear in these days of liquid air, and it is a fact that carburet gas can be frozen and thrown around the room like snowballs. But any one can freeze his own breath in the winter time.

If you stand before an unfrosted windowpane in a room not too cold on a sharp day and breathe on the pane you will soon discover that you have deposited a film of ice upon it, and very likely you will see this take on iridescent colors and remarkably artistic forms.

Now, so far as your breath is concerned, you have not frozen it at all. But it is something in the breath which you have deposited first and then frozen, and that is water. There is a certain amount of moisture in all air, sometimes more, sometimes less. The point of saturation is where the air can hold no more and the moisture then falls as rain.

Warm air can hold more moisture than cold air. When the warm south wind floats the clouds northward and they feel the chill rain follows, for the temperature has dropped and the air can no longer carry so much moisture, so it condenses and falls to the ground. When you go out of doors into the cold and breathe vigorously a cloud of steam proceeds from your nose or mouth. It is the condensing of the moisture which your breath held and which would have remained unseen on a warm day.

If you breathe on anything very cold drops of moisture are formed from the excess of steam and until into little rivulets. But the windowpane, being so thin that it feels the outside chill throughout its substance, so promptly abstracts the heat remaining in the moisture from your breath that it freezes right before your eyes and becomes a thin film of ice. You may cover the entire windowpane in this manner and thicken the frost by continuing to breathe upon it. Having so done, you may then take a painter's "electro," or cut, and print a beautiful picture in your own frozen breath.

The frozen breath on the window-pane often assumes beautiful forms resembling snowflakes or salt crystals formed by precipitation.

HANDY IN PRESERVING TIME

Device That Not Only Protects the Hands, but Is of Value In Many Other Respects.

A useful article for housewives who do their own preserving in the jar holder, designed by an Iowa man. It will not keep the jars from breaking and allow them to cool quickly, but will save the person who handles them from burning her hands. There is a circular metal frame with holes in it to permit the tops of jars to pass through. Arms with their ends bent down extend out from this frame and fit over the rim of a basin or other large pan, and one of these arms is adjustable so that it can be screwed tight to hold the whole contrivance firmly in position. The jars can be placed in the basin and the framework drawn over them and screwed fast. This leaves space between each jar so that they may cool quickly, where otherwise they stand close together, and each helps the other retain the heat. Then the jars are filled with the preserving mixture, whatever it may be, the lids screwed on and the basin removed to a convenient place till the preserves cool.

TAKES STAIN FROM MAHOGANY

Disfiguring Spots May Easily Be Removed, Though the Operation Requires Carefulness.

For the thumb mark that so often disfigures mahogany, or that blurred blue haze which clouds its polish there is a simple remedy which requires only a soft hand and a bit of courage. A soft rag or flannel, dampened with alcohol, must be passed quickly and lightly over the part. Water stains and liquor spots will disappear immediately. The amateur restorer, however, must heed the warning that the work be done with great rapidity and absolute confidence in oneself. To shake the wife of the rag on the surface means that the polish will be roughened, and made to look streaked, or as if glue had been spilled, and a furniture expert will have to be called in to lend his skill toward bringing back the smooth mirror-like surface once again. In old times a wax polish was customary, and the servants worked with a will over every piece, so that their tables and chairs would outshine those of the next big house. A dull finish was unheard of, and would have been scorned as showing laziness in the household, besides being a dust collector, for even a deck shows on unpolished furniture most plainly.

Our Pasteurized Milk is recommended for babies because it is pasteurized for purity (not just to keep it sweet). We have the only completely equipped modern pasteurizing plant in the city.

DAILY DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN
Food Specialist

LENGTH OF LIFE DEPENDS ON GLANDS.

Dr. Arnold, of Carlsbad, concludes that length of life is primarily dependent upon the condition of the glands, thyroid, liver and kidneys especially. The established theory has been that a man is as old as his arteries. The new doctrine is not inconsistent with the old, and both agree with Metchnikoff's theory of auto-intoxication as the cause of the degeneration of the arteries.

The duty of the glands is to secrete the various fluids needed for digestion of food and elimination of waste and other important functions related thereto. When the diet is simple these offices are performed without great expenditure of vitality, and then also the waste matters are most easily eliminated. Worry and bad mental conditions generally are also a source of auto-intoxication, so that the prime requirements for long and efficient life are simple diet, optimism, regular exercise, and rest.

IMPROVEMENTS IN GREEN COUNTY FAIR

Were Discussed At the Recent Meeting Of the Board Of Directors.

Editorial Note.

Monroe, Feb. 11.—Various matters toward the improvement of the Green county fair for 1911 were discussed by the new board of directors at their first meeting. The directors have advanced the price of admission and exhibition tickets from $1.25 to $1.50 in addition to the increase in general admission from 35 cents to 50 cents voted by the board at the annual meeting.

A system of fire protection for the amphitheatre is to be included in the coming fair improvements. The main entrance to the grounds is to be extended across the street and divided into entrances and exits. The secretary's office is to be moved south across the road and connected with the treasurer's office.

The work will be greatly systematized by the division of same between the directors who have each been assigned to special duty. A Chicago manager has offered the fair $300 for the midway privilege and agrees to furnish ten high class shows.

Go to Germany.

Leon O. Griffith, of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gard Griffith, will soon leave for Germany as one of the foreign representatives of the National Harvester Company, for whom he had worked for the past two years. The offer made by the concern is a marked advancement and Mr. Griffith has had the matter under consideration for several weeks and has just decided to accept the position. He has represented the company as salesman in this territory and a year after graduating from the agricultural course at the university at Madison, was connected with a large scientific dairy in New Jersey.

Mr. Griffith will go to Chicago Monday morning to begin a tour of the factories of the company in this country which will mean a two month's tour. He will probably go to Germany in May to take up his new duties.

Elaborate Banquet.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben G. Trent banquetted the members of their club at the Ludlow, covers being laid for fourteen. Table decorations were of dark red carnations and ferns. The guests were then taken to the Galusha home, 303 East Russell street where the evening was spent in 500.

Freeman Raymer.

Freeman Raymer, pioneer of Green county, died at the home of his son-in-law, Christ Teucherman, Jr., following a long illness of cancer of the stomach. He came here when three years of age with his parents from Pennsylvania and was 65 years of age at the time of his death. He leaves behind his wife three sons and two daughters, Mrs. Christ Teucherman, this city; Mrs. Pearl Raymer and Jessie Raymer of Seattle, who were at his death bed; Ruth Raymer of Seattle, and Stanford University, Cal.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Methodist church.

COMMUNICATION.

Abraham Lincoln.

On Sunday, the 12th, the people of this country will very generally observe the 102nd anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln, the name and fame of whom has become a household word all over our land.

What he said and did either as President or citizen, is very generally accepted and held in high esteem by all our citizens.

No other man in the history of the world as the leader of a great nation was ever called upon to exercise such great wisdom, yet among all the discord, clamor and abuse he was above all obstacles to a clear conception of the right and with firmness, yet with a compassionate regard for all sought the upholding and accomplishment of that which he in his judgment deemed the right.

But while he will ever be honored for his wonderful wisdom, his kindness, sympathy and love for all his fellow men, whether friend or foe, will forever place him foremost in the minds of all as an example for all to follow in their relations and dealings with their fellow men. Great men stand in awe in his day for fear that in the exercise of his kindly nature he might cause the demoralization of a necessary discipline in the army, utterly failing to appreciate the fact that every act of kindness and courtesy on the part of Abraham Lincoln toward the soldier in the field was a stimulant to a greater regard on the part of the soldier for the commander-in-chief and a stronger motivation for the nation and the cause in which they were fighting.

If Abraham Lincoln was human, his humanity was of the highest order and well worthy of the honor and emulation of all our people. And he cause he was human, statesman and peasant may find a guiding star in the history of his life worthy and safe for them to follow.

Abraham Lincoln was emphatically a man of the people—self-educated, self-made, an independent, conscientious thinker and remonstrant, and although not an academic scholar the logic of his reasoning was beyond the power of others to successfully assail. And although born in a log cabin and reared in the wilderness he was indeed the best product and Providence's best tribute to this nation at a time when a great leader was most needed.

Others may come and go but no other will be likely to become so exalted in the minds of the American people. No other will be likely to possess all of those qualities of heart and of brain that has made him the typical American among all our people—the ideal lawyer, statesman, citizen and friend.

And when memory's scroll Shall have been told And carefully laid away, And there remembeth not A living witness Of those fearful, dismal days, The records that have been written Will carefully be put away. For the sayings and the doings Of that great and noted man. This nation will grow old, But methinks the name of Lincoln will stand emblazoned On the pages then pursued, With a luster brilliant still With the wisdom and the goodness So noted in his life.

The Stone Pile.

Editor Gazette.
Dear Sir: The discussion of a stone pile for Janeville has brought out some good ideas, and also some foolish suggestions and I think it is an entire lack of acquaintance with the classes with which the stone pile is to deal. Only about one of a dozen sent to the lock up would pay, or earn their board working on a farm 16 hours per day, much less in 8 hours, and auto hire we suggested by "Subscribers". The Hobo seems to be the object of this crusade, i. e., to eliminate him. I write from this view point. Just send out the word that Janeville has a stone pile and within three weeks thereafter Hobo will be scarcer than hen's teeth. I think Hobos are a disease, I've been there. Also have been cured. A stone pile or a whipping post will cure the ailment, but you must not try it on the working man who is earnestly seeking work. "Subscribers" says rent a farm". That means throw some farmer and three or four hired men out of jobs. Then you are making just what you are attempting to cure. The pump and water tank is the best that I can suggest. Just put a tank where he must pump or get wet and drown and you won't ever get that fellow the second time and the warning will spread like wild fire and the name Rock Pile Co. will not be necessary.

TWO VICTORIES FOR HIGH SCHOOL FIVES

First Team Defeated Monroe School Five and Second Team Won From Y. M. C. A. Squad.

Two easy victories were gained by the first and second basketball teams of the high school, the former winning from Monroe high school 46 to 14, and the seconds beating the local Y. M. C. A. five 22 to 4.

Monroe was outclassed and outreached by the local first team. The Green county players put up a first class game, but were at a disadvantage because of their shortness of stature. The Bower City five played well together, but was weak in throwing backets. The score was 22 to 5 at the end of the first half. In the second half, Monroe displayed better playing while the locals did not strive to run up the score. Jamesville made fourteen points and their opponents nine.

The second team had things their own way in the opening game last night with the Y. M. C. A. quintet, allowing the associate squad but one field goal and two free throws, while the seconds made eleven field backets and one free throw. In the first half the Y. M. did not have even a "hook" failing entirely to make a point. Koch and V. Hemming each made four field goals and Soulman two for the second team. The playing was more interesting in the second half, the associate on five making four points and holding the school men to three.

Details of the two contests:
Janeville (first team): W. Hemming, c; R. Cunningham, rt; Kest, H. Brown, rg; Edler and Fritter, lg; Monroe: Cuthbert, c; Gibbons, rt; Gibbons and Stauffacher, rg; G. Collentine, lg.

Piled backets: Hemming, 10; Kest, 5; Cunningham, 4; Gibbons, 3; Caradine, Brown, 2; Edler, 1; Clayton, 1; Free throws: Kest, 2; Caradine, 2.

Referee: Metcalf; umphire, Knudson, High school (second team): V. Hemming, c; Soulman, rt; Koch, lf; Mott, rg; Hazen, lg.

Y. M. C. A.: Kripiner, c; Muenchow, rg; Kuhlow and Porter, lg; Kline, lf; Ryder, lf.

Piled goals: Koch, 4; Hemming, 4; Soulman, 2; Hazen, 1; Ryder, 1; Kline, 1.

PACKED HOUSE FOR MUSICAL COMPANY

Myers Grand Jammed to the Doors for "Sweetest Girl in Paris" Last Night.

Standing room was at a premium at the Myers Grand last night, and the house was jammed to the doors at the performance of the best of La Salle productions, "The Sweetest Girl in Paris." With a group of stars in the cast, and every one from the ball pup of Fredrick lower up to Trixie herself entering into the life of the performance, the audience was treated to a show that was everything that it was said to be.

This is the first week away from Chicago and stage settings and costumes were all in splendid condition. The work of Trixie Figanza needs no commendation and it is enough to say that she was at her best. Zoa Barnett and Dorothy Brunner, the former in the role of the buyer for the Chicago haberdashery firm and the latter, the sweetest girl in Paris, were "advertised" and left a very good impression in the minds of the listeners in the singing of the "whistly" song hits which have made the place famous.

Frederick Powers, who took the part of the young Pittsburgh millionaire who tried so hard to get rid of all his money, was excellent. Two other characters were handled in an excellent manner, that of Cobenso, the voiceless tenor, by Alexander Carr and Amelotte by Cathryn Palmer. Next to Trixie herself, the latter with her antics as the "mold of all work" who was forever looking for a man, kept the audience in a roar from curtain to curtain. Taking the whole cast all the way through, Janeville people had occasion to witness a group of singers and dancers last evening, who were most excellent and who have made names for themselves in their respective lines.

The song hits, such as "I Love Them All From A to Z," "Bombashay," "The Sweetest Girl in Paris," "Don't Forget the Number," "Boys! Boys! Boys!" and numerous others were all good and the stage settings and effects were planned in a way that has made a name for the La Salle pieces.

This is the first week away from Chicago and stage settings and costumes were all in splendid condition. The work of Trixie Figanza needs no commendation and it is enough to say that she was at her best. CHAPTER XIV.

PLAQUE AND MUNIC

UPON leaving timber line Cavanagh and Wetherford entered upon a wide and sterile slope high on the rocky breast of the great peak whose splintered crest lorded the range. Snow fields lay all about, and a few feet higher up the canyons were filled with ice. It was a savage and tempest swept spot in which to pitch a tent, but there among the rocks sheltered the minute canvas home of the shepherd, and close beside it, guarded by a lone dog and lying like a thick spread sock of rime boulders (almost unnoticed in their silent immobility) budded the sheep.

"There's your house," shouted Ross.

The older man, with white face of clammy, looked about him, unable to make reply.

"Hello, there!" shouted Ross, wondering at the absence of human life about the camp. "Hello, the house!"

Receiving no answer to his hail, he turned to Wetherford. "Looks as if Ambro has pulled out and left the collie to tend the flock. He's been kind of sick for some days."

Dismounting, he approached the tent. The collie, who knew him, seemed to understand his errand, for he leaped upon him as if to kiss his cheek. Ross put him down gently. "You're almost too glad to see me, old fellow. I wonder how long you've been lost here alone."

Thereupon he opened the tied flap, but started back with instant perception of something wrong, for there, on his pile of ragged quilts, lay the Basque border, with flushed face and rolling eyes, crushed with fever and entirely helpless. "You'd better not come in here, Wetherford," Ross warned. "You're here, horribly sick, and I'm afraid it's something contagious. It may be smallpox."

Wetherford recollects a step. "Smallpox! What makes you think that?"

"Well, those Basques have been having it over in their settlement, and, besides, it similes like it." He listened a moment. "I'm afraid Joe's in for it. He's crazy with it. But he's a human being, and we can't let him sit here alone. You rustle some wood for the stove, and I'll see what I can do for him."

Wetherford was old and wasted and thin blooded, but he had never been a coward, and in his heart there still burned a small flame of his youthful, roekless, generous daring. Pushing Cavanagh out side, he said with firm decision: "You keep out of there. I'm the one to play nurse. This is my job."

"Nonsense! I am younger and stronger than you."

"Get away!" shouted the older man. "Griegg hired me to do this work, and it doesn't matter whether I live or die. But you've got something to do in the world. My girl needs you, and she don't need me, so get out of here and stay out. Go bring me that wood and I'll go in and see what's the matter."

Cavanagh looked him in the face an instant. "Very well," said he, "I'll do as you say. There's no use of our both taking chances."

It was beginning to rain, and the tent was dark and desolate, but as the fire in the little stove commenced to snarl and the smoke to pour out of the pipe the small doublette took on cheer. Wetherford knew how to care for the sick and in the shelter of the canvas wall developed unforeseen vigor and decision. It was amazing to Cavanagh to witness his change of manner.

Soon a pan of water was steaming, and some hot stones were at the sufferer's foot, and when Wetherford appeared at the door of the tent his face was almost happy. "Kill a sheep. There isn't a thing but a heel of bacon and a little flour in the place."

Twenty miles of most difficult trail lay between Cavanagh's cabin and this spot. To carry the sick man on his horse would not only be painful to the sufferer, but dangerous to the ranger, for if the Basque were really ill of smallpox contagion would surely follow. On the other hand, to leave him to die here unaided seemed inhuman, impossible.

"There's only one thing to do," he called to Wetherford, "and that is for me to ride back to the station and bring up some extra bedding and my own tent and so camp down beside you."

"All right, but remember I've established an quarantine. I'll crack your head if you break over the line an inch."

There was no longer any feeling of reaching up or reaching down between the two men—they were equals. Wetherford, altogether admirable, seemed to have regained his manhood as he stood in the door of the tent confronting the ranger. "This Basque ain't much of a bad, but as you say, he's human, and we can't let him lie here and die. I'll stay with him till you can find a doctor or till he dies."

"I take off my hat to you," responded Cavanagh. "You are a man."

Once again the two men—true, having Wetherford, Cavanagh set himself to cooking some food to take back with him to the peak. He brought in his pack horse and burdened him with camp outfit and utensils and extra clothing. He filled his pockets with such medicines as he possessed, and so at last, just as night was falling, he started back over his difficult trail.

Wetherford met him at the door, no longer the poor old tramp, but a priest, one who has devoted himself to Christ's service.

"How be he?" asked the ranger.

"Delicious," replied the herder. "I've had to hold him to his bed. I'm glad you've come. It's lonesome up here. Don't come too near. Set your tent down there by the trees. I can't have you infected. Keep clear of me and this camp."

"I've got some food and some extra clothing for you."

"Put 'em down here, and in the morning drive these sheep away. That noise disturbs the dogs, and I don't like it myself; they sound lonesome and helpless. That dog took 'em away for awhile, but brought 'em back again. Poor devil, he don't know what to think of it all."

Ross did as Wetherford commanded him to do and withdrew a little way down the slope and without putting up his tent rolled himself in his blankets and went to sleep.

The ranger's first duty in the morning was to feed the faithful colts and to send him forth with the flock. His next was to build a fire and cook some breakfast for Wetherford, and as he put it down beside the tent door he heard the wild pleading of the Basque, who was struggling with his nurse, doubtless in the belief that he was being kept a prisoner. Only a few words like "go home" and "sheep" were intelligible to either the nurse or the ranger.

Cavanagh waited till a silence came, then called softly, "Here's your breakfast, Wetherford."

"Move away," retorted the man within. "Keep your distance."

Ross walked away a little space, and Wetherford came to the door. "The dog is sure sick. There's no two ways about that. How far is it to the nearest doctor?"

"I could reach one by phone from the Kettle ranch, about twenty miles below here."

"If he don't get better today I reckon we'll have to have a doctor." He looked so white and old that Cavanagh said:

"You need rest. Now, I think I've had the smallpox. I know I've been vaccinated, and if you go to bed—"

"If you're saying all that preliminary to offering to come in here you're wasting your breath. I don't intend to let you come any nearer than you are. There is work for you to do. Besides, there's my girl. You're detailed to look after her."

"Would a doctor come?" asked Ross quite huskily, moved by Wetherford's words. "It's a hard climb. Would they think the dog worth it?"

Wetherford's face darkened with a look of doubt. "It is a hard trip for a city man, but maybe he would come for you—for the government."

"I doubt it; even if I were to offer my next month's salary as a fee. These hills are very remote to the townfolk and one dog more or less of no importance, but I'll see what I can do."

Ross was really more concerned for Wetherford himself than for the Basque. "If the fever is something malignant we must have medical aid," he said and went slowly back to his own camp to ponder his puzzling problem.

One thing could certainly be done, and that was to inform Gregg and Murphy of their herder's illness. Surely they would come to the rescue of the colts and his flock. To rush a telephone involved either a ride over into Deer Creek or a return to the Fork. He was tempted to ride all the way to the Fork, for to do so would permit another meeting with Lee. But to do this would require many hours longer, and half a day's delay might prove fatal to the Basque, and, besides, each hour of loneliness and toll rendered Wetherford just so much more open to the deadly attack of the disease.

It was hard to leave an old and broken man in such a drear and wind contested spot, and yet it had to be done; so, fastening his tent securely behind a clump of junipers, Cavanagh mounted his horse and rode away across the boundary of the forest into Deer Creek basin, which had been the bone of much contention for nearly four years. It had once been a part of the forest, but under pressure the president had permitted it to be restored to the public lands open for entry. It was not "agricultural ground," as certain ranchers claimed, but it was excellent summer pasture, and the sheepmen and cattlemen had leaped at once into warfare to possess it. Sheep were beaten to death with clubs by hundreds, herders were hauled out of the park with ropes about their necks and their outfits destroyed, and all this within a few miles of the forest boundary, where one small sentinel took effective watch and ward.

Cavanagh had never been over this trail but once, and he was trying to locate the cliff from which a flock of sheep had been hurled by cattlemen some years before when he perceived a thin column of smoke rising from a rocky hillside. With habitual watchfulness as to fire, he raised his glass to his eyes and studied the spot. It was evidently a campfire and smoldering dangerously, and, turning his horse's head, he rode toward it to stamp it out. It was not upon his patrol, but that did not matter. His duty was clear.

As he drew near he began to perceive signs of a broken camp. The ground was littered with utensils. It was not an ordinary campsite, and the ranger's heart quickened. "Another campsite," he thought, "the bear has driven off."

He reached the site and found a rustic tent and provisions burned up," he exclaimed wrathfully.

This herdsman snorted and shied as he rode nearer, and then a shudder passed through the ranger's heart as he perceived in the edge of the smoldering embers a boot heel and then—a charred hand!

In the smoke of that fire was the rook of human flesh.

Wetherford met him at the door, no longer the poor old tramp, but a priest, one who has devoted himself to Christ's service.

"How be he?" asked the ranger.

"Delicious," replied the herder. "I've had to hold him to his bed. I'm glad you've come. It's lonesome up here. Don't come too near. Set your tent down there by the trees. I can't have you infected. Keep clear of me and this camp."

Is Life Worth Living?

By REV. F. M. HUBBELL
Pastor of Congregational Church
Mayville, N. D.

TEXT—My soul is weary of life. Job X. 1.

At one time Job, with a large happy family, had lived in comfort surrounded by rocks and herbs and great abundance. But calamity after calamity fell upon him. The Sababeen curried off his oxen; the lightning fell upon his sheep; the Chaldeans took away his sons under a fallen building; he himself was smitten from head to foot with loathsome sores. And Job began to wish that he was dead—perhaps he even thought of committing suicide.

But calamity stricken Job is only one of a vast multitude who, crushed to earth by the relentless weight of adversity, have eked out a miserable existence, while perhaps the mind has been crowded with thoughts of self-destruction. We are moved therefore to ask, with Job of old and with the poor wretch, the tragic ending of whose life is noted in last night's paper,

Now one's answer to this question depends, not so much upon the experience, painful and pleasurable, through which he passes, as upon the significance which he attaches to those experiences. This is conclusively shown from the fact that from no quarter are the answers uniform.

Out of similar conditions one would exist while another rejoices in it. From the fires of persecution comes back to our question, now a positive negative, now as possible an affirmative, and again a mere question point. Such different estimates of life grow out of a man's fundamental beliefs—they seem often to depend absolutely upon his experiences—the experiences often affect the beliefs; but a man's philosophy of life is the determining factor.

One man declares there is no God; another believes in the Christ revelation of God—and they reach different conclusions as to whether life is worth living.

Take the first man who denies the existence of a personal God. Then, for him, there's no conscious, intelligent volitional cause for his existence. His own mental and heart powers are simply unique products of such material and forces as food, water, light, air, heat and electricity. He is but a creature of circumstances, developed from a material thing—call it a protoplasmic germ—into a sentient being that hunger and thirst, suffers physical pain, writhes in mental agony.

Moral responsibility is excluded; there's no moral source for it—no higher moral to be held responsible to. Then there's no obligation resting upon the strong to regard the weak; the midnight ruffian is as innocent as the babe he murders, groveling millions must suffer to no directing purpose. To endure for a time is of no avail, for immortality has no meaning. The soul is but a figment of the imagination; imagination is but a bubble oozing out of brain tissue; human love merely the effervescence which passes off from chemical reaction.

The bold pessimism of Von Hartmann and Schopenhauer is a widely accepted doctrine of life today. Von Hartmann finds no increase in history; progress simply increases man's consciousness of the vanity of life. Schopenhauer says: "To live is to desire, to desire is to want, to want is to suffer."
